

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A system and method for transferring a pattern from an overlying layer into an underlying layer, while laterally trimming a feature present within the pattern is described. The pattern transfer is performed using an etch process according to a process recipe, wherein at least one variable parameter within the process recipe is adjusted given a target trim amount. The adjustment of the variable parameter is achieved using a process model established for relating trim amount data with the variable parameter.